

【論説】

Regional (Developing) Promotion Theory and Practice (II) -Taking Experience of Regional Promotion in Okinawa to Southeast Asia-

Hiroya YOSHIKAWA

<Contents>

Chapter III: Ways and Means for Developing Regional Activities into International Cooperation

1. Development types of regional projects (Necessity of Chance and Initiative)
2. Importance of "Catalyst" that Promote a Regional Project to International Cooperation
3. Conditions for continuation of regional activities as international cooperation

Chapter IV: Promotion of Local Industry, Conclusions and Problems

1. Why entrepreneurial spirit and procurement are necessary
2. Globalization, light and darkness for developing countries
3. Methods for Regional Promotion as Seen in Okinawa and Regional Development in Southeast Asia

<Preceding chapters>

Foreword: Why are Regional Developing Promotion the Current Themes?

Chapter I: Drawing on Japanese and my Experience of Regional Promotion

Chapter II: Regional Activity and International Cooperation in Japan

<To be continued>

Proposal & Implementation: Regional Promoter upbringing, Educational Program

-Using the JICA-Net Development, Implementation and a Evaluation-

Chapter III : Ways and Means for Developing Regional Activities into International Cooperation

1. Development types of regional projects (Necessity of Chance and Initiative)

Let's mainly discuss latest cases (from 1999 to 2001) of regional projects and Okinawa's projects that promoted to international cooperative projects. I will indicate the locations of these projects on the Japanese map of Figure 4. I will analyze keys to maintain projects and future issues and tasks to make them successful international